by Daniel Klein

Questions Before We Start:

Why are you doing this? What do you want to get out of this piratical lyceum?

What is your favorite book?
Name a book you abhor.

How would you describe your philosophical background?

1) What's your personal philosophical/spiritual/religious background?
(If you don't have one, no worries. Maybe that's why you're here.)

2) What's your philosophical training?

(It doesn't have to be "official." We forgive engineers a lack of liberal-arts training! We'll also accept watching Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure. Training comes in so many forms and can include classes, books you've read, people you've talked to, spiritual practices you've explored. . . .)

Would you consider your sailing journey a philosophical one?

How "intentionally" has your life unfolded?

Would you describe yourself as a "seeker"?

Who's your favorite philosopher?
(Yes, you can say Mr. Miyagi.)

Do you have a philosopher you dislike?

If you were named Philosopher King, what one principle would you see as fundamental to ruling?
